

The Wagile Manifesto

The E&P guiding principles to secure project delivery success.

At E&P we passionately believe that good governance is a key success factor for the realisation of benefits.

In our team we regularly share guiding principles – the foundation for our concepts, consulting services and working principles.

We believe, that the early alignment of project objectives and business strategy is a pre-condition for the delivery of projects. The main element of good governance is a transparent decision process.

We believe, that the quicker an organisation makes educated decisions, the more agile is the delivery. The availability of executives is a pre-condition for quick decision making.

The vehicle for change is empowerment and trust in experts. Empowerment needs a well-defined frame to avoid inefficient control structures.

Governance has a positive impact on the delivery success.

So much so, that at E&P we believe that good governance has more impact on the realisation of benefit than the standardisation of the delivery model.

Where do you or your company focus your attention?

Is it in the implementation of good governance or in the alignment of a standardised project delivery model?
